Dear Camden Planning

I have lived in London for 37 years now and worked around Covent Garden & Holborn for many of these, therefore, frequenting Museum Street on many occasions.

I was very sad to hear that such a large building will ruin such a quaint and historic area and therefore, would like to object strongly and hope that you keep these buildings and spend money on them instead of knocking them down and over developing these fabulous pockets of London that have survived for so long.

With my job I visit a lot of these new buildings to see various companies. Sadly, after Covid, many are now empty and finding it hard to find companies to lease them, as so many people are working from home. I think it's very short sighted to add yet another large tower to the many already existing in London, which could have a change of use to residential.

Please think twice before overshadowing this beautiful Conservation area.

Kind regards

Penny Greenwood
