dear Planners,
I am writing in response to the consultation about the rooftop heating plant at the Bertram Street development.

I just want to put in my comment that I am now used to the Noah's Ark shape of this plant, and think the white colour is acceptable as it is. I think further cladding or covering would make it bigger.

Although it was a shock at first, not all residents of Bramshill Gardens really object to the present siting and appearance of this plant. I realise I am relatively unaffected by it compared to friends from number 24, 26 and further down and friends in Winscombe Street, because my house is at an angle to it. The movement of the plant you offer, however, seems likely to be to the detriment of some other neighbours, particularly some in Croftdown Road where residents have already suffered a lot from these works.

Yours sincerely,
Jane Steedman
