Apologies for sending this in late – I understand that you have not completely closed the window of opportunity for commenting on this application from HS2.

I endorse every point which Jeff Travers has already sent to you. Not being a specialist but an ordinary member of the public thinking about this application, it does appear to me that it would be pointless to build an extension to the Hampstead Road Street bridge which is unnecessary, which might, if I have understood correctly, take space from potential housing (which everyone knows is desperately needed throughout London, not just in Camden) and which would be using excess concrete and steel – wasteful plus bad for the environment.

For these reasons, I object and would urge Camden to draw up it's own plans before giving in to HS2.
