This is not just a treasured haven for a great many visitors, just spending a few minutes in this space it becomes immediately clear how much of a haven for nature it is. This development would reduce light reaching the Phoenix Garden to such an extent that the number of viable flowering plant species would be drastically reduced, in turn reducing the number of pollinating insects and by extension, birds and bats. This dramatic reduction in biodiversity surely does not fit with Camden Council's Biodiversity Strategy? The Phoenix Garden is a resource and refuge well worth protecting and any Council with conscience would not hesitate to deny this planning permission.
2024/0993/P	Lisa de Rosenborg	25/05/2024 11:39:17	OBJ	I'm all for refurbishment of existing venues, but to build higher these days in such a congested and historical area, and do anything that would jeopardise the existing Phoenix Garden is truly destructive. Why do anything that would negatively affect the only remaining natural garden site built after World War II. I am shocked that the others have all been destroyed and that this is the only remaining garden. These were constructed as green spaces for people, havens from the pollution and construction which takes up most of city space. These spaces should be safeguarded and nurtured, and invested in. I cannot believe Campden Council does not contribute towards these gardens and that the gardens have to even turn to the public for help. The Phoenix Garden brings solace and enjoyment to the public who depend on it. Here we speak of mental health all the time, and we are about to annihilate a place that naturally improves people's mental health...this would be catastrophic in such a gas-filled, noisy, populated hub, with its little oasis for wildlife and human life.
