2024/0993/P	Alex Fry	09/07/2024 10:53:07	OBJ	I am very concerned about the effects of constructing tall buildings on the nearby park. The park is a very precious local resource enjoyed by the local community and those from all over the world. One of London's most amazing aspects is its green spaces and these MUST be preserved for our children and future generations. Our collective health and well being depends upon it.
2024/0993/P	Kristina Margareta Rapacki	04/07/2024 16:42:49	OBJ	The effect on the Phoenix Gardens, located behind this proposed scheme, is absolutely devastating. The height of the scheme will block 60 per cent of this invaluable community garden's sunlight, with irreparable damage to the ecosystems thriving in this unique urban oasis. The Phoenix Garden is an invaluable community and wildlife resource in the heart of central London which is deeply loved and much-used, and part of a dwindling number of public green spaces in central London. This scheme cannot go ahead as currently stands – it would be an absolute outrage. Regards, A concerned local resident

It is a safe haven for many people working and living locally in the area, since discovering it I've told many friends who have also passed this on. It is like a well-known hidden gem. A lot of people seek comfort and refuge in the busy city. Having places like this is what separates London from cities like New York, it still has charm and history, it will be a disastrous thing to destroy it for planning permission. I strongly urge you to think of the people this garden brings happiness to and its significance it retaining some feeling of community in the city.
