2024/5468/P	Dusica Michalski	15/01/2025 14:49:48	COMMNT	I am a resident of a ground floor flat, which will not benefit from the lifts. The works and the resulting structure and lifts will definitely be detrimental to my well-being. The light and air circulation we currently have is essential to my physical and mental health (I am in my 80s and have a chronic lung condition). There will be significant loss of amenities, in particular daylight and fresh air, which is especially important if, like me, one spends a great deal of time at home. As my entrance is supposed to have a walk-through lift, a proposal which was rejected in 2018, the mind boggles as to how this has been proposed once again. I am also worried that in the inevitable event of the walk-through lift breaking down, access to and from my flat, which I use daily, will be impeded. In addition to these fundamental issues, the aesthetics of the proposed lift and enclosure is not only not an improvement but actually the opposite: ugly and cheap-looking.
2024/5468/P	Waldemar Januszczak	15/01/2025 16:57:20	APP	As residents of Brookfield Mansions we are aghast at the plans for the lifts submitted here and hope very much they are rejected. The idea of the walk-through lifts is particularly anxious making. If the lift is ever stuck on an upper level - a very likely situation at some point - anyone trying to enter the block will be unable to do so. It's madness! There is also the serious impact on the light entering the apartments. An important window view would be lost and replaced by a claustrophobic enclosure. Aesthetically - and I write as the art critic of The Sunday Times - the new scheme is clumsy and inelegant. And of course the impact of the noise and disruption on those of us who work from home will be long-lasting and huge. The entire plan for the scheme is being driven by the residents of the top floors who will profit massively - but at an unacceptable cost to the rest of us.
