

Dear Planning Officer,

I wonder, can you imagine the shock of discovering a giant white plastic box, of all things, right in the middle of the Hampstead Conservation Area's green space? This is exactly what I've had the misfortune of witnessing from my property, courtesy of the recent extension built at 17 Arkwright Road while the neighbours were conveniently away.

Not only is this blight of modernity an eyesore, but it's situated directly below my window, effectively obliterating the once scenic view of Hampstead that I had grown so accustomed to. The offensive structure—crafted from what can only be described as industrial-grade UPVC—has turned a picturesque vista into something rather more akin to a recycling site.

But it doesn't end there. At night, the reflective surface of this structure bathes my bedroom in an unwelcome glow, making it near impossible to sleep without transforming my room into a makeshift cell by sealing the window shut. Frankly, it's not quite the "Hampstead charm" I signed up for.

I must insist that this eyesore be removed immediately and replaced with something more in keeping with the character of the area. A proper redesign, one that respects both the local heritage and the sanity of your neighbours, would be most appreciated.

Regards,
Leo Wan
