Engagement has involved it has conducted mapping, research, and workshops at the Local Studies and Archives Centre, engaging young heritage trainees and local experts. Public contributions have shaped a heritage map through exhibitions and festivals and social media campaigns. A collaboration with Footways identified pedestrian routes linking heritage sites, and an education programme has delivered 25 activity days with local schools. Additionally, 8 local young trainees contributed to summarising content for signage, ensuring accessibility and relevance. We chose Arlington House as a spot for a sign as it was suggested by a local guide and resonated with young people that we spoke to.

Stakeholder engagement has been a key focus, with walkabouts and discussions with business owners and LBC. While public involvement has been further encouraged through a social media campaign. Heritage experts including local guides, members of local history societies and local conservation areas, have all provided valuable feedback and support for the signs.

Based on the information that you have provided my view is that the plaques do not require advertisement consent or planning permission, but where they are to be attached to a listed building or structure listed building consent is required.

The reason that advertisement consent is not required is because as with blue plaques their primary purpose is to commemorate and inform. Obviously, if the design of the plaques changes and there is for example sponsorship added then our position would change.

The reason planning permission is not required is because, as with blue plaques, the size of the plaque means that they would be considered de minimis. If the size were to increase then our position may change.

Authority Employee/Member

With respect to the Authority, is the applicant and/or agent one of the following:

- (a) a member of staff
- (b) an elected member
- (c) related to a member of staff
- (d) related to an elected member

It is an important principle of decision-making that the process is open and transparent.

For the purposes of this question, "related to" means related, by birth or otherwise, closely enough that a fair-minded and informed observer, having considered the facts, would conclude that there was bias on the part of the decision-maker in the Local Planning Authority.
