Definitions of Common Treatments for Trees

Crown thin (Reduction in density - branch thinning)

This treatment involves the removal of entire branches throughout the crown, concentrating on secondary or faulted growth. The same general shape, size and appearance is maintained with a less dense crown, which allows increased penetration of light.

Crown reduce (Reduction in width and/or height)

This treatment reduces the tree by a specified amount and results in a smaller crown; but this may have an adverse effect on the appearance and future growth.

Shortening back - Heading in

This treatment involves the reduction in length of branches, back to a convenient crotch or growing point.

Pollard

This treatment involves the cutting back of the main stems or trunk to a specified height above ground. This will have an adverse effect on the health and appearance of a tree and generally is only advisable if such treatment has previously been undertaken.

Lifting (removal of lower branches)

This treatment involves removing the lower branches to a specified height above ground level.

Cleaning

This treatment involves the clearing out of any dead, diseased or dying branches, any unwanted epicormic growth and dead stub ends
