An architectural line drawing of a building facade. The wall is covered in a brick pattern. On the left side, there is a tall, narrow window with a grid pattern. Below it, there is a large, multi-paned window. At the bottom left, there is a double door with vertical panels. On the right side, there are two large, multi-paned windows. A vertical line runs down the center of the facade, possibly indicating a corner or a structural element. The drawing is done in a simple, clean style with black lines on a white background.
