

Dear Alex,

re: 2013/5066/T 6 Netherhall Gardens

I have concerns about this Notice of Intent. It would seem that this lime tree which is growing at an angle according to the photographs has a TPO on it, which I find strange, and is causing quite major subsidence to an extension - far in excess of what would normally be expected from such a tree. The extension is on a severe slope, the extension may be poorly built, all trees and ivy are considered at fault but no data have been submitted about the tests that are purported to have been carried out.

Please refuse until an adequate explanation of the problem and the appropriate data about drain tests and building movement have been submitted.

Best wishes
