August 2014.

The following images are examples where the v formation of the rear parapet has been kept as well as a few where the original have been altered. We are proposing to maintain this feature. The examples are all viewed from public highways whilst our proposal is not seen from the street. Most of these are in conservation areas and in fact one of which was instigated by the council. The purpose is of the edited set is to show that it is a rather common practice in London to allow for this addition and there is no harm caused to the atmosphere or street scene if done with care and attention and in fact it can add to the variety of the rear facades which the Georgians themselves anticipated and allowed for.
