Your comments on the planning application

The Black Cap is one of our capital city's most well-known, historic and iconic gay pubs. It has a history going back into the 19th century and is a landmark building in terms of London's gay heritage. It should be preserved - not obliterated to create a series of modern apartments. I have objected to previous applications to develop these premises, and reiterate my objections in this case. Camden ought to recognise and celebrate the unique and special significance of this venue by doing what it can to prevent its destruction. An increasing number of people are taking a keen interest in gay history and this trend is likely to continue to grow in
