The wide pavements installed around the square at the time of the Olympic games add greatly to the attractiveness of the area and the existing refreshment facilities (the cafe in the square and the 'cabbie's rest' just outside already provide a good service in keeping with the surroundings. There are numerous other refreshment facilities close to the square and I don't feel that any small benefit to tourists that such a kiosk might bring would outweigh its damaging effect on the appearance of the square and its immediate surroundings.
