The land is designated for public open recreational space as a residential development is not appropriate.

Any planning decision should take account of all residential & recreational requirements.

More housing reqs and increasing density of population ~~should~~ requires ample recreation spaces otherwise people will be homebound with decreasing physical & social activity and consequences on health & health budgets - holistic thinking across departmental responsibilities - think social determinants of health.

Whilst in principle I am not against housing development, ~~know~~ as I am aware of the lack of housing for people with low incomes, I am against the loss of designated recreational space, which is of increasing importance as the population ages and gets increasingly more active.
