

Hi Tom,

As we have waited too long with removing it, the seedling has grown to about 100 mm (so a bit over 750 mm). The seedling is within two meters of two other much larger trees on either side (which have seeded it). It will not prosper as it is in the full shadow of its two neighbors and will also affect the two adjacent trees negatively over time. I hope this is a clear case for removing the seedling even though it has grown to slightly more than 750 mm.

Best,

Daniel
