I have not seen a "flat roof" on this neighbouring house!
It is originally a Victorian house, but was extensively re done 3-4 years ago.
As far as I have seen, nobody has lived permanently in the house.

During the building period an application was made for a "balustrade" on the balcony that was built.
I objected, because there was no picture, no description of the "balustrade".

I wonder: is it in fact this "balustrade" which has come up again as "flat roof" - As it is new, is a balcony surrounded by glass sides. - With some imagination you could perhaps say that the floor of this balcony forms a roof over the space underneath!
There is a need for a more precise description!!
Therefore I object.
