Your comments on the planning application

Basically the fitness first company is not taking account of the street's historic character, as protected (correctly in my view) by conservation area status. The street has a historic uniformity of local brick, white stucco and the regents park cream colour; this adds to the character and beauty of London and improves the local environment , not just for residents, but visitors and people who work in the area. This is of long term substantial value and local business's, whilst entitled to maximise their business must not damage the environment around them. The sign is large, glaring red, ugly in the context of the historic area. If the council allows
