Your comments on the planning application

Objection for the same reasons stated 3 years ago. We flooded in 2001 and experience a high water table in winter which requires active use of sump pumps to prevent flooding. The likely raising of the water table due to the extended downhill restriction posed by the basement extension is unacceptable unless ground water can be channelled away. Furthermore, digging next to our extension which has a shallow foundation may result in a weakening of our building's structure. These risks have been recognised by the consultants, but seem to have been ignored.
