I am a member of the neighbourhood development forum and the Neighbourhood Plan is clear that the site should be protected for community use. There are few enough such sites already and there is actually a great need for more such facilities. It seems that the centre is enabling people with learning disabilities who might otherwise be totally marginalised, to be part of the wider community. It also greatly helps their carers, who can often be very isolated. And it brings in other people to participate and understand more about people with learning disabilities. It is really important to keep it open.
