

Application No:	Consultees Name:	Consultees Addr:	Received:	Comment:	Response:
2016/0926/P	Zaem	53 sussex street 53 sussex street	04/04/2016 14:57:24	COMMNT	Whole foods should be more available
2016/0926/P	Michael	171 Harrow Road	07/04/2016 07:34:16	SUPPRT	This was excellent and is missed.
2016/0926/P	Maria Shepherd	15 Spring St London W2 3RA	06/04/2016 08:04:03	COMMNT	The market supports lots of little businesses which are vital to London 's economy
2016/0926/P	Katie Konyn	UCL 4 Stephenson Way NW1 2HE NW1 2HE	06/04/2016 11:13:19	COMMNT	This food market is a real benefit to the area and really aids the positive regeneration of the KX area.
2016/0926/P	Victoria Woods	35 Shouldham Street Marylebone W1H 5FP	01/04/2016 23:57:26	SUPPRT	I am writing to express my support for the restoration of the King's Cross Real Food Market. Whilst, like B.W. Collins, I wholly support the regeneration of King's Cross Square, I find his objections to the market absurd on several levels. Firstly, by characterising the market as 'clutter' he draws a particularly bizarre comparison with the 'African Village'. The latter was indeed a large, unsightly conglomeration of architecturally insignificant buildings which detracted from Cubitt's station facade. Thankfully, the King's Cross regeneration project has seen their demolition. The Real Food Market, however, is confined to a tiny portion of the square, and consists of a small number of colourful, pop-up structures around 2 meters high. The stalls are uniform and aesthetically inoffensive, whilst the produce they shelter is artistically arranged. Not only do the stalls add a certain vibrancy to an otherwise rather dull square, but they are only in place for four days per week. Rather than detracting from the original station design, they add charm and character - as another poster has commented, the square would have originally been a local hive of activity where market vendors would have been welcomed. Furthermore, I fail to see how the instigation of a small-scale market selling high quality produce would detract in any way from the creation of a 'high quality public realm.' The market attracts a vast number of tourists, locals, and commuters, whilst each stall has obtained a following of regular customers. Indeed, having become very well-known, the market has helped to create a cultural hub in an area which, ten years ago, was a locus of crime. The restoration of the market will only serve to brighten the area, and to reject this planning proposal on the basis of a single objection based on personal bias would be outrageous.
2016/0926/P	Oliver Carsten	13 Clifton Dale York YO30 6LJ	01/04/2016 16:46:20	SUPPRT	The market was brilliant. It really added to the attractiveness and vibrancy of the station plaza. Without it, the space is rather sterile. I am a frequent user of Kings Cross Station.
2016/0926/P	Zaem	53 sussex street 53 sussex street	04/04/2016 14:57:13	COMMNT	Whole foods should be more available

Application No:	Consultees Name:	Consultees Addr:	Received:	Comment:	Response:
2016/0926/P	Ruth Doherty	22 Brondesbury Road	07/04/2016 16:49:41	COMMEMP ER	Please can we have this back. It was great for the area and so handy for those of us who work near the station.

---