2016/2808/P	Coral Temple	34b Camden Square London NW1 9XA	27/06/2016 18:12:50	OBJLETTE R	I object to these "temporary" installations. I live very locally and they would prove an absolute eyesore. There is a large church for guardians to inhabit anyway. Also I deeply object to the fact these "temporary" units are the only planning alerts visible to the public when in fact there has already been an application for FULL planning permission for a housing complex. This would destroy the character of this conservation area, ruin neighboring views, put the famous Rochester Sq Spiritualist Temple at risk of closure and at worst demolition. I have had no e-mail alerts about this at all despite the fact that I am registered to receive alerts from this area. I made a telephone call last week to Camden planners asking if there was any planning alert for Rochester Sq Temple and was advised that there were none. It is only through a stroke of luck that I happened to pass a tree with a notice about the 2 temporary units that I know anything at all. People in the neighborhood are completely unaware of what is being "planned". This is a conservation area. The Temple has served the community for 90 years and until it was unnecessarily abandoned by the SNU who had promised to renovate it when really they just were after profit from the land. A new build in this historical environment would be a social disaster. an eyesore, a cultural loss, overpopulation, decimation of valuable trees and nature and devaluation of all surrounding property.
2016/2808/P	Judi Blackmur	18 Rochester Square	27/06/2016 21:10:51	NOBJ	I support the application, and prefer them to be located on the primary site option. After all the consultation and debate, it's time the squatters were finally removed. I have been unable to find the planning application for the ultimate project for this site and wish to be advised when this is submitted.
