Will they be powder coated in white to resemble the current windows. Nearby Rosebery Square replaced it's single pane sash windows with wooden double glazed units and these not only work but fit with the building. I'm worried from the detail provided that these replacement windows will look noticeably at odds with the building given the high number of windows and the fact that nearby Rosebery Square can be seen in relation to Holsworthy. There is no detail as to why wooden framed replacements could not be used given they work fine on nearby properties run by the same housing association.
