I teach at least 2 days each week, and renting an office in London is currently unaffordable for me. If there is significant noise in the background, I may lose my job. I understand construction noise will be significant for this project, and while I have no qualms with the project itself I am concerned about the construction period and intensity. If at all possible, having 2-3 quiet afternoons per week would allow me to keep my job. I hope this is a realistic compromise that can be considered.
