There are currently NO windows in the roof, so I cannot understand why this has been granted permission? The application has a new proposed mezzanine floor at the height of these new windows, so desks with people sitting there will be directly looking out of these new windows. The windows of my top floor flat directly face the height of these proposed windows. Currently these are completely private with no one looking in. These new windows will completely change the outlook of my flat and the privacy I have. It will mean people are directly looking into my flat! How on earth has this been allowed and passed by your team without even needing planning permisssion?! I thought the planning process was supposed to protect people's privacy and stop new windows being put in that directl looked into people's actual homes? As you have let this development through without it even having to have planning permission, you have not even considered this aspect or the local residents for whom this change will severely effect their lives and their happiness and wellbeing. I would like an explanation for this complete inconsideration and bypassing of the laws I thought were supposed to protect us from things like this?
