A photograph of the Meliá White House hotel entrance. The building is a multi-story, light-colored structure with a central courtyard. In the foreground, a large, dark grey stone sign reads "MELIÁ WHITE HOUSE" in raised, white letters. The sign is supported by two pillars and is partially obscured by large, rounded green bushes. Above the sign, a row of four flagpoles holds the flags of the United Kingdom, Spain, the United States, and the European Union. The building's facade is composed of numerous windows, and the sky is visible in the background.
