Not only is the compounded impact of the proposed footprint of all extensions larger than the footprint of the original cottage, their spread-out nature and competing volume overshadow the compact nature of the original cottage. In addition, the vaguely traditional style of the proposed two story extension, belonging somewhere in the realm of modernised arts & crafts idiom relates very awkwardly to the style and period of the original cottage and its existing extension. This is a small, yet stylistically difficult building to plan an extension for and only a careful, subtle and high quality architecture will be able to succeed in the task. The proposal is not of that calibre.
