That road is most delicate because it is the one lane that allows residents access to the entire Parliament Hill area. Last time the same person refurbished, all residents in the area were tremendously affected because the workers have no alternative but to block the road.

It's obvious this application is part of a bigger plan (there isn't even a staircase linking the pub to the function room anymore!!) How stupid do the developers think we are?? A sense of community and a space to bring people together is a tremendous buffer to social isolation and loneliness. I've loved the events we have held in the function room and have made lifelong friendships as a result. We had something so special and it is so missed. Nothing locally even comes close to how important the function room was with all the events and activities for locals.
2018/6320/P	Peter Ashworth	27/01/2019 12:32:05	OBJLETTE R	It would appear that there was NEVER any intention by the hidden owners of The Magdala to reopen the pub as it was, and so by basically shutting the doors and hoping all the locals who used the building for bonding, parties and local group meetings would forget it was ever there the owners seem to believe they can ride roughshod over local feelings AND CAMDEN PLANNING!! I used to run a group named 2a (after the address of the pub) from 2009 and we used the first floor as the meeting space. I understood that this floor was to be kept as a community room. What happened to that? The loss of the Magdala has caused friendships to break up, has removed a well-loved meeting place and a very good eatery. It is so sad that this has happened, and for some reason it seems acceptable when the buyers promises turn out to be nothing but lies, dragged out for years by inaction. The pub should be reopened immediately and the first floor should remain part of the pub NOT MORE FLATS.
