Most of the documents relating to these applications are available on line — but the drawings are not. Why cannot we see paper copies of applications, that we can read properly?

The Planning Statement says that this basement will be virtually invisible at ground level and that its visual impact will be 'negligible'. This may be so — but how can we be sure without seeing drawings?

If the Statement is 100% accurate, we have no objections — but we must have certainty.

Until we get this, we must ask for refusal.
