This is a small cup de sac and we already have one basement excavation which has been going on for nearly five years. We regularly have our cars blocked in by lorries and trucks. The noise and dust are horrendous. One of my sons is suffering from asthma which gets worse when they restart the building works so we are sure it is linked. Furthermore in the last three years we have had five cases of rats in our garden. Another major basement excavation would be intolerable and would significantly impact our lives, and health. Finally I am concerned that the excavation of a basement on a hill which this house is on could lead to significant instability and potential collapse of the house.
