Summary of consultation responses:

May I ask what the reason is for cutting down these trees? Are they diseased or rotten? If not, I strongly object to these apple trees being cut down.

Assessment

The apple trees are not visible from the public realm, they are not particularly large or noteworthy examples of their species. They are not of any particular historic significance. While they do provide some visual amenity within the back garden areas they are not considered to be of sufficient merit to justify bringing them under the protection of a tree preservation order.

The Council does not wish to object.
