2019/6011/T	Marsha Ribeiro	18/12/2019 14:05:00	OBJNOT	As I understand it, there is no disease issue or subsidence risk with this longstanding lime tree and so I cannot see the justification for felling a healthy tree to the ground. As it is also in the shared communal garden of Holmefield Court and Gilling Court, it surely falls under common property ownership or should be treated as a public good. I would question too why there isn't a Tree Preservation Order to this particular lime tree and indeed others across Camden given stated policy targets to reduce CO2 emissions, particularly in our heavily polluted world.
2019/6011/T	Eugeny Buldakov	18/12/2019 16:31:04	OBJ	The tree is near the middle of the garden behind the Gilling and Holmefield Court blocks and this garden is used by residents of Holmefield Court. However, there was no local consultation of Holmefield Court residents. The tree is described as not diseased or dangerous. And it is described as not causing damage to drains of subsidence. I therefore object to removing this three.
