Informative(s):

- 1 Reasons for granting listed building consent (delegated):

15 Chester Terrace is part of the grand palace-style terrace of 37 houses built around 1825. The neoclassical terrace, statutorily listed Grade I, was built by James Burton to the design of John Nash. The terrace is of stucco, the longest unbroken facade in Regent's Park with an alternating system of bays. The main block (Nos 6-38) is of a symmetrical composition of 3 and 4 storeys.

The terrace suffered severe bomb damage during WWII and hence the only original part of the terrace is the façade, the interior and rear parts of the terrace being ostensibly rebuilt in the 1960s. The terrace (but in essence the façade) is listed for its association with John Nash.

Consent was previously granted (2018/6364/P and 2019/0630/L) for reorganisation of the interior which had been subjected to a certain amount of unauthorised change anyway.

The current application is for modification of details of the stair between the 2nd and 3rd floors. The need for this change has come about due to errors in the original survey of the building.

Since the fabric of the interior of the terrace is all modern it is considered that the proposal will have limited implications to the historic significance of the property.

The proposed changes are not seen as either contentious or deleterious to the architectural significance of the terrace.

The application has been advertised in the press and by means of a site notice. Regent's Park Conservation Area Advisory Committee has responded with no objection. Historic England issued a letter of flexible authority endorsed by the NPCU.

The site's planning history has been taken into account when making this decision.

Special regard has been attached to the desirability of preserving the listed building and its features of special architectural or historic interest, under s.16 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 as amended by the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act (ERR) 2013.

As such, the proposal is in general accordance with policies D1 and D2 of the Camden Local Plan 2017. The proposed development also accords with the London Plan 2016 and the National Planning Policy Framework.
