Why my garage is now a food depot

A Highgate woman has turned her garage into a distribution centre to support struggling food banks across north London.

Naomi Russell founded the organisation Food Bank Aid: North London in late April after seeing demand for food banks sky-rocket.

Helped by a team of 90 volunteers, Naomi now delivers 7,000-8,000 shopping bags of food each week to 16 food banks, from Euston to as far out as Borehamwood and Bushy.

"One of the questions people ask me is why they should donate food here and not straight to the food banks," she said. "I say if you donate food here, we'll send it to where it's needed most."

Jo Rosenblatt, who volunteers in admin and communications for Food Bank Aid, told this newspaper the problem is worsening, and not confined to any socioeconomic group.

"We're going into a huge global recession and this is the knock-on effect: increased poverty," she said.
