

An architectural elevation drawing of a brick building facade. The drawing is rendered in black lines on a white background, with the brickwork pattern filled in grey. The building features a complex roofline with multiple gables and chimneys. The facade is divided into several horizontal levels by string courses. There are several windows of different sizes and shapes, including some with shutters. A small, square window is visible on the right side of the building. The building is set against a background of stylized trees and a ground line. The drawing is oriented vertically, with the building's height increasing from left to right.
