This property , in a conservation area, has been subject to a number of Planning Applications, in connection with the current refurbishment of the house.

I would like to point out an infringement to the front elevation. The porch has been infilled, without consent.

This is a significant change to the front elevation , as the remainder of the terrace has integral porches recessed from the front facade, and the original unique front doors still intact.

The applicant has fitted a new front door of a different design , flush with with the front elevation.

A previous application (Ref no 2019/6002/P) gained consent to replace the front windows and door with 'like for like '. The new door is not a copy of the original, and approval has not been sought for the infill of the porch.

The unconsented change to the door and porch detract from the integrity and charm of the conservation area.
