The Architectural original concept included for lightwells along the footpath to Kentish Town Road as shown on the attached drawings number P14-C. This served a much larger new basement area. Since the construction of the new basement requires secant piled retaining walls to four sides of the site footprint, the line of piles along London Under Ground (LUG) tunnels in Kentish Town Road were considered and in previous consultation with LUG this proposal was found to be unacceptable due to the location of the piles being within the allowable minimum limit of 3.0m to the side of any existing tunnels.

Due to LUG's objection to the original proposal, the width of the basement was reduced thereby removing the proposed lightwells and locating the piles away from LUG's 3.0m limit to their asset. BJB Consulting's drawing number 2304-BJB-00-ZZ-DR-S-0206-P04 confirms the final previously agreed arrangement of the piles in relation to the existing tunnels therefore the planning condition relating to the lightwells is no longer relevant.

If you wish the existing condition to be changed, please state how you wish the condition to be varied
