Such a development is completely inappropriate and unnecessary in this area. There is no longer any further need for office space (many new office buildings recently built are lying empty) , there is no provision for essential affordable living homes, the height of such a building is completely out of character for the Bloomsbury and Covent Garden area. The long standing blighting of this part of Museum Street and New Oxford Street should be addressed with a totally different proposal more in keeping with the local needs and respecting the historical and architectural heritage nearby.
