2021/4368/P	Kenneth and Amanda Elliott	02/01/2022 14:41:54	OBJ	We should like to object to the above planning application on the grounds of precedent. If one additional storey is added to a terraced courtyard house in the Quickswood/Conybeare section of the Chalcots Estate, it will open the way for many more. The attraction of these small two-storey houses is that they are rare in North London, offering accommodation in an open space which will become overshadowed and overlooked from very close quarters if third storeys are added to the terraces. The space between these houses is small, nowhere more so than in Conybeare, which is not as wide as the Quickswood areas.
