Dear Sir/Madam,

I'm writing to object to the destruction of two mature London plane trees in the garden of 8 Dought Street. The local plan for destruction is simply flawed, those trees are meant to be conserved on their century-year-old site. The trees bring the community together and greatly serve children and future generations as part of their daily lives. Those particular trees are immensely enjoyed and appreciated across the neighbourhood, it will cause us great emotional distress as well as noise pollution to experience such destruction taking place.

I urge you to take my and other local residents' objections seriously and our amenity value into consideration in any future step on the matter.

Save the trees. Save the trees. Save the trees.
Trees are the lungs of the world.
