To Whom it May Concern,

I hereby object to the proposed felling of two plane trees:

Trees perform many ecosystem functions such as purifying air (reducing pollution), providing shade (thereby lowering temperatures), and also form a habitat for many other species, such as birds and insects.

They improve well-being, which in a city-environment with relatively little vegetation is highly important.

For all these reasons, trees should increase in number in cities, not reduce, especially when a local group is proposing solutions to keep the trees without causing damage to buildings.

Best wishes,
