Is this really right so close to the British Museum? Some reality theatre - surely this area - nicknamed The Jewel of Camden must aim to keep its cultural heritage - this virtual reality cinema experience needs more explaining as it seems to me it will further lower the tone of this area which is already on its way to being turned from a jewel into a money making slum with rubbish littering the streets - commercial establishments fly tipping bags of rubbish everywhere. I cannot see how this virtual reality experience so close to the British Museum with a densely populated residential flats can suit this area. The new development north of Kings Cross is better suited. I strongly oppose
