BACKGROUND

Pathway to Discovery is an immersive exhibition that aims to provoke curiosity to the passer by through two engagement points.

The first are ten interpretation boards that invite passers by to pause and interact with the boards. Learning about the context of each question and the Crick's involvement.

The secondary engagement will be an installation title, installed as a vinyl on two walls next to the window, alongside each title will be an introduction panel of the show. This will physically connect the installation to the Crick itself.

Dangoor Walk is a private road owned and maintained by the Francis Crick Institute. The fence where the exhibition appears is owned and maintained by the Francis Crick Institute. The other side of the fence is owned by the British Library who have given their consent for its use for this exhibition.
