2022/2019/P	Harriet	06/06/2022 15:57:10	SUPPRT	I think this is a wonderful idea and the more we can use the space around us for recreation when everything is turning into housing, the better.
2022/2019/P	Dario Scalambretti	06/06/2022 09:34:58	COMMNT	I have been excited about this project since I first heard about it in 2019. I believe it is going to be an incredible asset for the Camden borough and for London, not only for the environmental benefits that it will bring but also for the interest that the highline is going to raise with visitors from all over the world. I cannot wait to be able to take the first stroll on the Camden Highline.
2022/2019/P	Patricia Thomas	06/06/2022 14:24:25	COMMNT	I am writing to object to this application. I have lived for a very long time near Camden Market. It began innocently enough with a small number of stalls selling craftworks and ethnic clothing. We were assured that this is how it would remain. I do not need to say how this has changed: it is now said to be up for sale for £1.5b. I am not suggesting that the intention behind Highline is to make a huge amount of money but bringing in money, regardless of the wishes of residents, becomes paramount after a while. A few years ago I donated a small amount of money to Highline, which then seemed an innocent attempt to build a walkway from Camden Town to King's Cross. It has changed. The need to hold 'events' in order to raise money to make the walkway viable is the beginning of a depressing process. Living in the vicinity will become similar to living near Camden Market. Do not imagine that 'events' will close at 10.30 so long as the concept of TENS (Temporary Event Notices) exists. Similarly the annual number of events will grow and Camden will endorse them as it does for the Market. I am not against the existence of a Highline but this needs rethinking if it is going to be an asset to Camden.
