| 2022/3096/T     | Ros Franey              | 23/07/2022 11:45:47 | OBJ      | This is the only good-sized tree in the gardens of that part of Marquis Road or York Way. I can see it from my upstairs window, and its position for surrounding birds is clearly vital, in a strip of back gardens that are steadily being encroached on by building.It sounds from the application as if the owner wants to remove it because it's inconvenient that it will require annual pruning. But I think trees come with responsibilities (particularly here, in hot central London) and shouldn't just be disposed of like that.I have a golden robinia in my front garden which I prune every winter. It rewards me by providing insects for birds, by filtering light into my kitchen and by protecting my privacy. And many neighbours have told me they appreciate it: it's an amenity for the street.The robinia at 68 is an amenity for those of us who look on to it, and a necessity for the wildlife it supports. I would urge the owners - please - to keep and prune it, at least for a few years, until the new tree they intend planting lower down the garden has reached a comparable size.  |
| 2022/3096/T     | Daniel Penny            | 24/07/2022 23:38:25 | OBJ      | There is no public notice of this.   |
| 2022/3096/T     | Jane Duran              | 24/07/2022 20:35:53 | OBJ      | It would be a real pity to fell the beautiful Robinia from the rear garden of 68 Marquis Road. Surely we wantmore, not less, tree life to flourish in the narrow corridor of rear gardens betweeen Marquis Road and YorkWay - green space already so reduced because of the proliferation of encroaching building extensions. Treeshelp to sustain our depleted birdlife and restore fresh, clean air. Enjoyed by neighbours, this lovely Robinia canalso be seen by passersby on Marquis Road via the passageway between the houses. I do hope that Camdenwill not approve the felling of this tree.  |
| 2022/3096/T     | Daniel Penny            | 25/07/2022 00:12:06 | OBJ      | Why chopping a tree down? Objection. on the grounds of a conservation area. read the rule book and come back. it is black and white. Camden planning - why does this get through?  |
| 2022/3096/T     | Susanne Griffin         | 23/07/2022 13:19:27 | OBJ      | As a neighbour further along the road I am well aware that the local bats and birds make good use of all the existing (sadly much reduced) vegetation that remains in the once much larger garden spaces between York Way and Marquis Road.I have noticed building works being carried out at 68 Marquis Road and wonder what exactly is being done there and whether any planning applications had been made (or perhaps did not need to be made?) for whatever works have been done?The arboricultural report says that regular pruning of the Robinia is required to keep it at an appropriate size.As a person who has trees in my own garden, I am aware that in the Conservation Area most of our trees require regular pruning as a matter of course, due to the fact that we have buildings and walls close by.Given the importance to local wildlife of retention of whatever greenery remains and the fact that this rather beautiful tree is visible from the street and much enjoyed by passers by, I object to its felling since felling it also goes against local Conservation Area guidelines. I see no reason why it could not be regularly pruned instead. |
