2022/3608/P	Nicola Michaelides	07/10/2022 12:17:43	COMMNT	With many of my communal rooms sharing the back of Goodge Street, this installation would greatly affect my household. Having these planted so close to where I live, work and sleep, will enhance noise pollution in the quite area we currently have. Noise during the day is already hard to bear as I work from home and noise from sources out of control (builders, people of the street etc) can affect my household greatly, however at night there is tranquillity. I fear that these installations will primarily cause sleep disturbances. I live in the centre of the city and lucky enough to have a small green space on the other side of my building and no tall, obstructive buildings. This installation would also ruin the historic look of the buildings in the area and become an eye sore.
2022/3608/P	ms mary peretz	07/10/2022 09:47:03	OBJ	We live at No 13 Colville Place and feel that the installation of 6 heat pumps close to our home will increase the noise pollution significantly particularly at night. What you might not realise is, despite mitigation of the sound, this back courtyard is like an enclosed sound box, so any noise is considerably augmented. If there is a better, quieter pump that would be that would be better.
2022/3608/P	Lou James	07/10/2022 11:56:30	OBJ	I object to this proposal. Colville Place is a conservation zone backing onto Goodge Street. It has existed for over 200 years as a distinctive residential street in this increasingly commercial area. There is a strong community which has stood the test of time over more than two centuries, despite the increasing disregard for its residents from new businesses coming into the area. Noise pollution is a huge factor in threatening the future of this special residential street, as long suffering homeowners, all of whom dutifully pay their council tax, become increasingly exasperated with the various heating, air conditioning and other devices attached to the rear of buildings on Goodge Street, with seemingly little regard for the impact on their neighbours. If Camden wishes to preserve the co existence of residential and commercial properties that is a a huge feature of the borough, it must give more account to the long term residents, who remain, loyal constituents, long after each transient business comes and goes.
