The rear extension that was built in the 90s and the external side wall to the side return.

Why is it necessary to demolish or extend (as applicable) all or part of the building(s) and or structure(s)?

The clients' brief is to upgrade and refurbish the existing ground floor to allow for an enlarged kitchen/living area to accommodate a growing family.

The existing timber-framed extension is in a state of disrepair with areas of rot and water ingress. The extension roof is made from structural glass which has some substantial cracks and is in need of replacement. The existing garden room extension and the associated internal works are not sympathetic additions to the property. The bricks that have been used in the rear extension are noticeably different from the original bricks and the architectural detailing is not kindred with the period of the property.

The existing rear extension is to be rebuilt; to allow a better connection to the garden and, to provide a more complementary addition to the architectural heritage of the property.

The existing retaining walls in the garden are showing signs of subsidence and are in need of replacing or, for the garden to be leveled to allow for one new retaining wall around the perimeter of the garden.
