Is it a parking platform of some kind? If so, it's not clear why this terraced cottage within a listed row of houses should have a car park built in front of this terrace. The house like others on the row was built and designed to have gardens that looked across to the Heath, a huge part of the charm of this row for over two hundred years, for those living there and those passing by to enjoy. There is also plenty of residents parking available for those who live here. Could we also know what a 'flood preventative' measure is - given that this street is on the hill. What is that and has this house or others around it experienced flooding we wonder? It would be good to know. Finally we have been made aware by neighbours nearer the house of a large grey drum (some kind of heating device?) which is noisy when operated. Might we know what its purpose is and where it is to be situated? Thanks.
